

Competition authorities are studying similar digital markets

This enables experience-sharing but duplicates resources and time for both public authorities and stakeholders. To ensure international coherence and an efficient allocation, competition authorities should produce a joint study in the context of a working group in a relevant network (e.g., European Competition Network, International Competition Network, G7).

